

Not This Time, Seminoles!

Lincoln, NE. — Six seconds of the third quarter was all it took.

Nebraska's Irving Fryar returned a Florida State punt 82 yards for a touchdown, and six seconds later, on the ensuing kickoff, NU freshman Mike Knox made a hit on Florida State's Greg Allen. The ball popped into the hands of Nebraska defensive end Tony Felici, who carried it into the end zone from 13 yards out.

Those touchdowns put Nebraska in control, and the Cornhuskers went on to defeat Florida State, 34-14, last Saturday, much to the delight of most of the 76,289 fans who paid their way into Memorial Stadium to produce NU's 113th consecutive sellout.

Nebraska led 10-7 when Fryar fielded Rohn Stark's 63-yard punt, started to his right and then cut back across the field, away from his blocking. According to Fryar, "I thought for a second and said: 'Okay, let's go to the races and see who catches me.'"

Of course, no one did.

Junior quarterback Nate Mason made the most of his first collegiate varsity start, directing the Cornhusker offense to 464 yards of rushing. Included in that total were 234 yards on 20 carries by I-back Roger Craig, who tied the school record for a touchdown run from scrimmage when he took off on a 94-yard jaunt to ice the game in the fourth quarter.

Meanwhile, the Nebraska Black Shirts shut down Florida State's ground game, limiting the Seminoles to just 54 yards in 41 carries.

When there wasn't a hole, Roger Craig (21) found another way to get through the line.

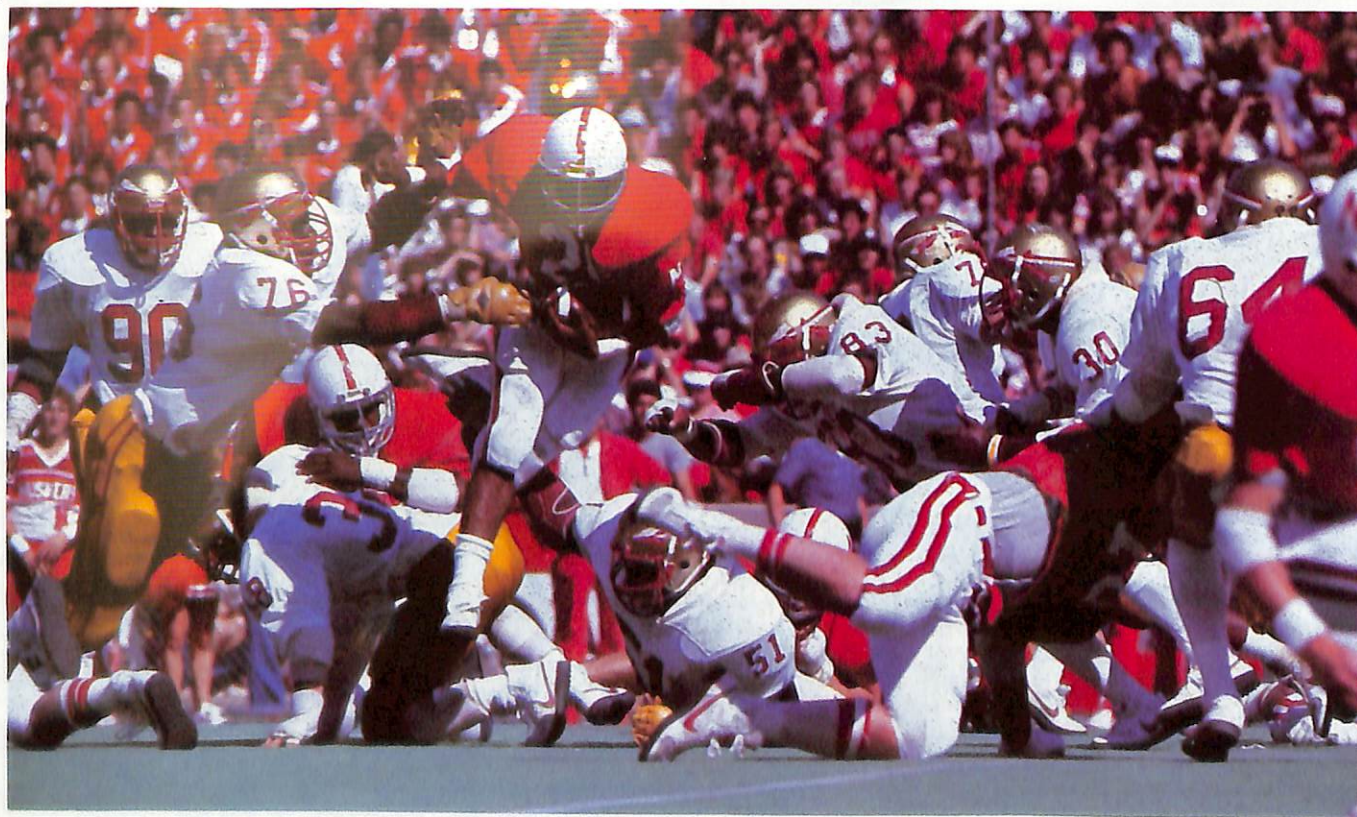

Defenders Ric Lindquist (15), Allen Lyday (18) and Tony Felici (46) halt a Seminole threat.

Brent Evans (48) and Jeff Merrell (74) weren't supposed to be starters in pre-season, but they proved they belong.

That's a lot of defense chasing FSU's Michael Whiting (27) as Dave Stromath (99), Toby Williams (97) and Jeff Merrell (74) close in.

Roger Craig had to go topside, but he got the job done, rushing for 234 yards in only 20 carries.

Those white-shirted arms are reaching for Roger Craig, but they didn't catch him very often.

Lockerroom Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "We felt we were at a crossroads after what happened against Iowa. We came out and played aggressive football, which we didn't do last week, but we still had too many mistakes. I was disappointed that we failed to hit the open man with our passing. We ran the football well, though, and we have to do that to be successful. It appeared the offensive line played a lot better and more aggressively than last week. The quarterbacking has caused me a lot of sleepless nights. It's the strangest situation I've ever had. In the past, we've had quarterbacks who audibled well and who knew the system. One time today Nate (Mason) ran the wrong way and made a 15-yard gain. I have trouble handling that. I'm not built that way. I'm used to playing things by the numbers. But maybe I'm going to have to loosen up on that score."

Jimmy Williams, defensive end — "The monkey was never on our backs. Florida State was playing us in our own backyard. I said something to our defense every time we went in the game, and the best thing I said was, 'If you lose a game, a lot of people won't be in your corner. They start doubting you, and you find out who's really on your side.'"

Phil Bates, fullback — "Our linemen did a good job. That's the only way we can get going. It makes things pretty easy when those guys are moving people. The more our traps go, the more our opponents will want to close down the middle. But you have to keep running those traps to keep them honest; otherwise, all they would do is stack up on the outside and try to stop our wide stuff."

Roger Craig, I-back — "Last week I was trying too hard and it destroyed my game plan. I was thinking of breaking the long one. Today I was taking each play step-by-step. First, I was squeezing the ball. Second, I was reading my blocks. Third, I was running hard. When you do those things in order, everything falls into place."

Dan Hurley, offensive tackle — "We didn't play even halfway to our potential against Iowa. We didn't practice well for Iowa and it showed. Watching the films was a disgrace to see how we didn't push them off the ball. This week we were intense and it was a lot better. Penn State will be the best team, on paper, that we've faced, and we just have to get better each week."

Jeff Krejci, safety — "Penn State will have the best personnel of anyone we will play this year, with the possible exception of Oklahoma. We look at it as probably the biggest game of the year right now, as each game should be."

The Seminoles

Bobby Bowden, head coach — "We were afraid of Nebraska popping the big one on us. When you've got a defense that hasn't played much together, there's no coordination there. They don't overlap each other. When a guy makes a mistake, there's not somebody to cover for him. When you make a mistake, it's usually a big one. Today it was 94 yards. Shoot 17 yards would have been enough. Seventeen yards would have been plenty. I hope we continue to improve, and I hope Nebraska does too. I hope Tom Osborne has a great year because he deserves it. I said they (Nebraska fans) were good fans last year when they lost. They were good today, too, but it's easier when you win. It's hard to be excellent when you lose, and they were last year. This year, they were doubly excellent."

Rick Stockstill, quarterback — "First I want to say the thing that impresses me most about Nebraska is not how big they are, how fast they are or how they hit — it's the sportsmanship and class they showed today. I have never played a group with more sportsmanship. We figured we were in shape after the first half. Then we stopped them and they missed a field goal. Nebraska lost a lot of air right there. But they threw two knockout punches with the punt return and the kickoff fumble recovery. We came back and scored right after that I still figured we were going to win."

Rohn Stark, punter — "Basically, we had three breakdowns that really cost us the game the punt return fumble on the next kickoff and then (Roger) Craig's long run. Now, we've just got to regroup and come back strong."

James Harris, cornerback — "We got a little down. I'm not real sure why. Maybe that's a sign of us being somewhat of a young team. We got a little rattled. We aren't supposed to do things like that."

Jack Stanton, defensive coordinator — "Nebraska is not as good a team as last year. They've got two guys who played in their backfield last year who are in the pros now (Jarvis Redwine and Andra Franklin) and they had one of the two best quarterbacks we played against last year (Jeff Quinn)."

Mike Whiting, fullback — "We beat ourselves. We just had too many mistakes. Our breakdowns and lack of execution gave them the big plays."

Injury Report

Nebraska came through the Florida State game with only one significant addition to its injury list. Defensive tackle Henry Waechter was hit in the left ankle by the helmet of a Florida State player, who was trying to block him as he pursued Seminole quarterback Rick Stockstill. The badly bruised and sprained ankle may keep Waechter sidelined for this week's game with Penn State.

Linebacker Steve McWhirter, who was injured in the Iowa game and did not play against Florida State, remains questionable for Saturday's battle with the Nitany Lions.

Defensive end Jimmy Williams suffered what is believed to be a dislocated finger in the Florida State game, but that injury was not considered serious enough to sideline him. The remainder of Nebraska's injuries last Saturday were assorted bumps and bruises.

The Way We See It...

Fran Fischer

play-by-play voice of the 80-station Penn State Sports Network (in his 16th year)

"Penn State has the balanced offense to go to whatever Nebraska's defense gives them. Offensive football is still taking advantage of the defense and this year, Penn State has enough diversification and enough skilled players to put more points on the board. Defensively, Penn State is not experienced, but they play with a lot of enthusiasm and get to the ball well. The jury is still out on whether this team is as good as Joe Paterno's teams in 1968, '69, '73 and '78. But it could be. It's a definite possibility. I'll say Penn State 24, Nebraska 10."

Mark Hyman

Philadelphia Bulletin

"I was at Nebraska in '79 and I know how difficult it is to win there. The heat can take a lot out of you and the fans are intimidating. I know Penn State has had an extra week, but I don't think they've had the early preparation necessary for this kind of game. I'm also not convinced that Todd Blackledge is a quarterback capable of playing catch-up football, should Penn State fall behind. He's hard to read. Sometimes he's brilliant, like he was against Missouri last year and against Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl. Sometimes, he's ineffective. My prediction is Nebraska 20, Penn State 12."

Mike Babcock

Lincoln Journal-Star

"I'll say Nebraska 17, Penn State 14. That was the final score in the Cornhuskers victory over Oklahoma in Lincoln in 1978. It was the score by which the Sooners defeated the Cornhuskers the next year in Norman and it was the score by which Nebraska lost to Houston in the 1980 Cotton Bowl. Those were the great games which established a pattern. Match Nebraska against other good team in a crucial game and you get 17-14. Penn State probably should win, but Nebraska will find a way."

The Huskers Say...

Huskers Illustrated

"Nebraska has rediscovered the importance of emotion in college football. The Cornhuskers put Iowa behind them and showed what kind of the team they really are against Florida State. More improvement may be necessary to beat Penn State, but the ball is rolling now. The Huskers have the momentum to shoot down a national power. We'll say Nebraska 26, Penn State 17."

Bob Black

Pittsburgh Press

"I remember the embarrassment two years ago when the game in Lincoln was on TV. Then last year, Penn State went into the Nebraska game unprepared. The team got back late Sunday night from Texas A&M and seemed to be a day behind the whole week. This year, Penn State has had two weeks to prepare for Nebraska. It has a stronger offensive line than it's probably ever had. I've never heard Joe Paterno blow a team up like this. He must have a reason for the smile on his face. I can see something like Penn State 21, Nebraska 14."

Terry Yeager

KMTV — Omaha

"Last week was a good week for me. On the Friday night newscast before the Florida State game, I picked the score right on the button, 34-14. This week, I think the game will be a 10-10 tie at the half, followed by a scoreless third quarter. Then, with about three minutes left, Roger Craig will break loose for the winning touchdown on a 42-yard run. The Black Shirts will come in and hold...and Penn State will bow their heads one more time. Nebraska 17, Penn State 10."

Wayne Dzubak

KETV — Omaha

"I was swaying both ways until last Saturday. I didn't know if Nebraska could beat Penn State two years in a row. But now I'm going to go with the Cornhuskers. The thing that impressed me Saturday was, Nate Mason made a lot of difference between a loss of two yards, or a two-yard gain, and a gain of 30 yards. Penn State will have a hard time with that I'm going to say Nebraska 21, Penn State 14."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

Much of the credit belongs to a dramatically improved offensive line, but that didn't prevent Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne from using a superlative to describe junior I-back Roger Craig's performance in the Cornhusker 34-14 win over Florida State.

"Roger ran about as well as any back we've ever had run here," Osborne said after viewing films of the game.

Craig rushed 20 times for 234 yards against the Seminoles. It was the third best day ever enjoyed by a Husker back Rick Berns holds the record with 255 yards against Missouri in 1978. Isaiah Hipp's 254 yards against Indiana in 1977 is the only other total surpassing Craig. Besides those three there have been five other 200-yard rushing performances in Nebraska history.

Craig also tied a school record with a 94-yard touchdown run up the middle to give Nebraska a 34-14 lead in the fourth quarter. Craig Johnson had set the record two years ago against Kansas in Memorial Stadium.

Although Craig was impressive, he wasn't the whole show in a Nebraska display that produced 22 first downs and 487 yards rushing. Osborne also was encouraged by the blocking of fullback Phil Bates and the play of quarterback Nate Mason in his first start.

"Mason didn't have a perfect day, but he played pretty well," Osborne said. "He had one or two major errors and one or two questionable plays."

On one of the questionable plays, Osborne had thought Mason ran the wrong way, "but he either called the play wrong or it was brought in wrong," Osborne said. "I was assuming he went the wrong way, but he went the right way."

Osborne conceded that Mason does not compare to 1980 starter Jeff Quinn in his ability to audible. "But Quinn was an experienced, redshirted quarterback in his fifth year and Nate is an inexperienced, non-redshirted quarterback in his third year," Osborne pointed out.

"Nate may not always do the right thing by the books, but he still has enough speed and athletic ability to get by with it," Osborne pointed out.

Even though he confirmed that Mason again will get the starting call in Saturday's Memorial Stadium showdown with powerful Penn State, Osborne admitted NU's quarterback situation has caused him more concern than any time during his nine-year tenure as head coach.

"They've all been so close, they all have some ability and they're all a little different. So, it's been a hard decision to make," Osborne said.

"Some say Mark Mauer made a big jump from first team to third team. But the difference between first and fourth really is so slight," Osborne said. "It doesn't take that much error to get yourself in that kind of predicament. It really becomes a tight race."

Osborne said Mauer's experience factor keeps him prominently in the picture. "I want to work Turner Gill in as much playing time as I can, but I'd prefer they weren't in highly pressurized situations."

"He didn't do badly against Florida State. He just didn't handle the ball that much after the one costly turnover. If Nate had had a lot of trouble in the first quarter and Turner had come in with a hot hand, the situation could have reversed itself. The situation is that close."

All quarterbacks played better against Florida State than they did against Iowa because "we played harder and controlled the line of scrimmage both offensively and defensively," Osborne said. "Overall, the defense wasn't bad. The secondary played well again. They gave up some yards, but (Rick) Stockstill threw the ball extremely well."

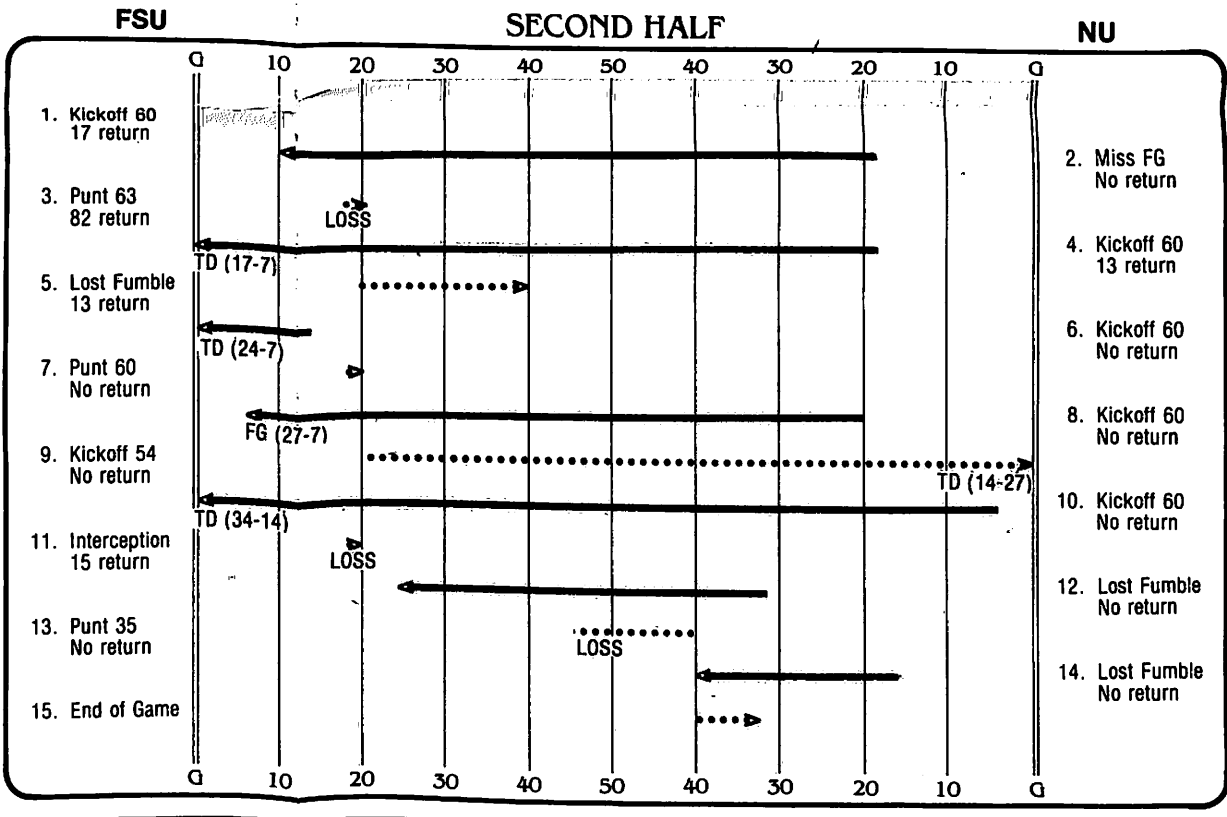

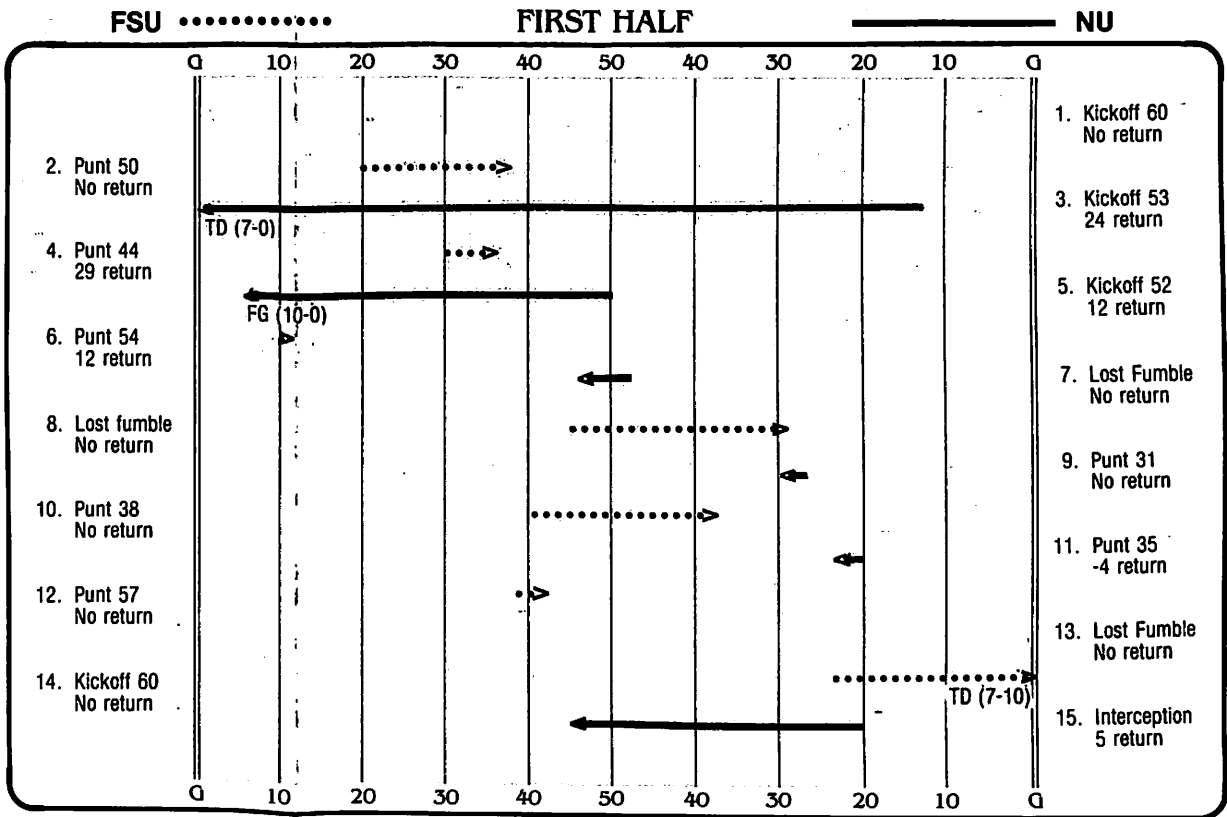

Osborne said the Florida State game dictates an improved pass rush is necessary for Penn State. "Against Florida State, we were dropping seven or eight people and the people who were rushing were getting held," Osborne said. "It's tough to get a pass rush that way, but we have to play over that."

An improved kicking game was equally important to Nebraska rebounding from the season-opening loss at Iowa.

"We improved a great deal and we need to improve a great deal more for Penn State," Osborne said. "To win, we need even more intensity than we had and we need to play more error-free."

The reason? "Penn State," Osborne said, "could be the best team we play all year."
